

THE MARYLEBONE HOTEL Marylebone Village's urban haven is unveiled

10 February 2009 – Fresh to the London scene, The Marylebone Hotel opened today under its new name following a multi-million pound renovation. Set in the heart of one of London's most fashionable neighbourhoods, no expense has been spared on the creation of a hotel which reflects the culture and character of its location.

Design details make the difference at this chic and contemporary hotel; countless eye-catching touches combine British twists with global design brands such as B&B Italia, George Smith Furniture, PTT Design, lamps by Porta Romana and bespoke fabric by GP & J Baker.

The Marylebone Hotel has successfully drawn inspiration from its village environs with the result that guests receive a truly memorable experience, one that can be found nowhere else but in the village of Marylebone. Local influence is particularly evident in the restaurant and bar, 108 Marylebone Lane, where the fare on offer has been sourced through local shops including: The Ginger Pig, La Fromagerie and Biggles Sausages.

The Marylebone Hotel is a member of The Doyle Collection, a luxury hotel group that comprises eleven hotels in six cities around the world. These design-led properties provide guests with service tailored to their individual needs as well as the luxuries they would expect.
